

Danger Lurks in the Privacy of your Own Shower...

Enjoying a hot shower or bath can be a very relaxing experience. Unfortunately, it may also be a dangerous one... Most people don't realize that more chemical contaminants are released into the air of their home from the shower than from any other source.

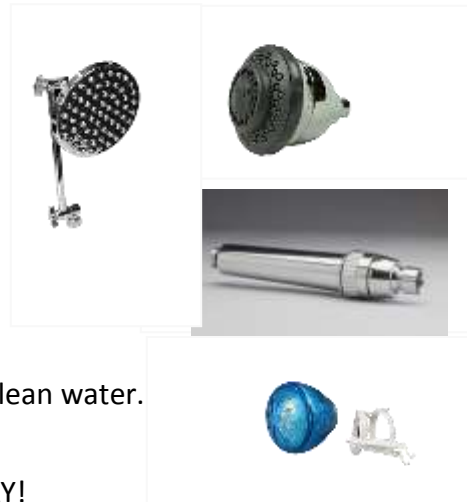

Nearly half of an average person's daily chlorine exposure occurs during a typical, ten-minute shower. A warm shower enlarges the pores in the skin, allowing dermal absorption of chlorine and other chemicals into the body. Likewise, within an enclosed shower stall dangerous chemicals such as chlorine become gaseous and are easily inhaled, possibly triggering serious respiratory challenges. Showering in chlorinated water may also cause rashes, skin irritation, or pre-existing conditions such as eczema to become exacerbated.

Well water often contains chemicals too, as well as dirt, lead and more. Some chemicals may be inherent to the area and source water. Others leach from plumbing pipes. Unfortunately, iron, rust and heavy metals chemically bond to the protein in your hair, destroying the natural balance.

Use of a Shower Solution™ Shower Head will result in softer, more manageable hair and healthier, young looking skin. For chemical-sensitive people, particularly small children, the elderly and sufferers of asthma or emphysema, chemical reduction is a safeguard against allergic reactions.
